The Sky Tells a Story: 5-12 Nov TAURID METEOR SHOWER: This shower is actually two streams, the North Taurids and the South Taurids. It produces about 5-10 bright yellow meteors per hour. They enter our atmosphere at 17 miles per hour and often fragment into multiple meteors. Taurid meteors radiate from the sky not far from the Pleiades star cluster in Taurus. 16-18 Nov LEONID METEOR SHOWER: The Leonids are best known for their 33-year peaks, during which 100s of meteors per hour can be observed. The last of these peaks occurred in 2001. Normal peak rates are 15-20 fast meteors (44 miles per second) and mostly blue or green in color, with many leaving persistent dust trains behind them upon disintegrating.
